FOREWORD

On December 16, 1950, during the Korean conflict, the President declared the existence of a national emergency. This brought into effect a vast complex of legislation, the activation of which was predicated upon the proclamation of a national emergency.

In 1958, the Committee on the Judiciary became interested in knowing what provisions of law had been brought into effect by the declaration of a national emergency. The emergency proclaimed by the President in 1950 had not yet been terminated and the chronic state of international tensions made it clear that it would not be terminated in the foreseeable future. In view of the protracted period of the emergency, the committee thought it desirable to review the national emergency measures within its jurisdiction, in order to evaluate the continued need for those particular provisions. The committee was of the view that, to consider this problem meaningfully, there was a need to know not only those provisions which happened to fall within its jurisdiction, but all such provisions. Consequently, the Library of Congress was asked to prepare a synopsis of the provisions of Federal law which became effective upon the proclamation of a national emergency by the President. This synopsis was published in 1958 as a committee print.

The heightened international tensions which developed in the latter part of 1961 created a new interest in the legal consequences of the actions which might be taken in the cold war by Congress or the President. In particular, there was substantial concern with knowing exactly what legislation would become effective upon the declaration of a national emergency by the President or Congress, or both. To fill this need, I requested the Library of Congress to bring up to date the synopsis which was prepared and published in 1958. The committee's interest, at that time, required the compilation of only those provisions of law which came into effect by reason of a national emergency proclaimed by the President. Since some statutes become effective upon the proclamation of a national emergency by Congress, we have expanded the 1958 publication to include this category as well. In addition, the provisions of law included in the 1958 publication were reviewed and only changes which occurred subsequently have been reflected in this edition.

To facilitate use of this document for legislative purposes, we have retained a format in which statutes are grouped by committee jurisdiction.

Once again, I wish to express my appreciation to Margaret Fennell, of the American Law Division of the Library of Congress, for her most gracious assistance and for her diligent and meticulous work in preparing this study. Miss Fennell is responsible not only for the current edition but for the 1958 edition as well.

EMANUEL CELLER, Chairman.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

There are a substantial number of provisions of Federal law which become effective "in time of war or national emergency," "in time of war," "during a national emergency declared by Congress," "during a national emergency proclaimed by the President," and during similarly designated periods.

The provisions of law contained in this synopsis are those that come into effect by reason of an emergency declared by the President or by the Congress.

The provisions are arranged in two groups, each in chronological order of enactment, under the names of the committees of the House of Representatives having jurisdiction of the legislation.

Group A contains laws which by their terms are clearly applicable to a national emergency.

Group B contains those laws which are temporary, the operation of which is not expressly dependent upon the existence of a national emergency, but which may have been enacted with such an event in mind.

The index, arranged by subject matter, refers to particular provisions of law both by page and item number.

WHEREAS recent events in Korea and elsewhere constitute a grave threat to the peace of the world and imperil the efforts of this country and those of the United Nations to prevent aggression and armed conflict; and

WHEREAS world conquest by communist imperialism is the goal of the forces of aggression that have been loosed upon the world; and

WHEREAS, if the goal of communist imperialism were to be achieved, the people of this country would no longer enjoy the full and rich life they have with God's help built for themselves and their children; they would no longer enjoy the blessings of the freedom of worshipping as they severally choose, the freedom of reading and listening to what they choose, the right of free speech including the right to criticize their Government, the right to choose those who conduct their Government, the right to engage freely in collective bargaining, the right to engage freely in their own business enterprises, and the many other freedoms and rights which are a part of our way of life; and

WHEREAS the increasing menace of the forces of communist aggression requires that the national defense of the United States be strengthened as speedily as possible:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, HARRY S. TRUMAN, President of the United States of America, do proclaim the existence of a national emergency, which requires that the military, naval, air, and civilian defenses of this country be strengthened as speedily as possible to the end that we may be able to repel any and all threats against our national security and to fulfill our responsibilities in the efforts being made through the United Nations and otherwise to bring about lasting peace.

I summon all citizens to make a united effort for the security and well-being of our beloved country and to place its needs foremost in thought and action that the full moral and material strength of the Nation may be readied for the dangers which threaten us.

I summon our farmers, our workers in industry, and our businessmen to make a mighty production effort to meet the defense requirements of the Nation and to this end to eliminate all waste and inefficiency and to subordinate all lesser interests to the common good.

I summon every person and every community to make, with a spirit of neighborliness, whatever sacrifices are necessary for the welfare of the Nation.

I summon all State and local leaders and officials to cooperate fully with the military and civilian defense agencies of the United States in the national defense program.

I summon all citizens to be loyal to the principles upon which our Nation is founded, to keep faith with our friends and allies, and to be firm in our devotion to the peaceful purposes for which the United Nations was founded.

I am confident that we will meet the dangers that confront us with courage and determination, strong in the faith that we can thereby "secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

DONE at the City of Washington this 16th day of December (10:20 a. m.) in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and [SEAL] fifty, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and seventy-fifth.

HARRY S. TRUMAN

By the President:

DEAN ACHESON,
Secretary of State.
